Campus Playcrafters Present Spring Play, "Green Pastures"

Green Pastures, by Marc Connelly, will be presented by the Campus Playcrafters and Choral Readers tonight at 8 p.m. in Jones Hall auditorium. Connelly's play was performed on Broadway and received wide acclaim. The performance, which will be complimentary to the public, is directed by Martha Pearl "Teach" Jones.

In Green Pastures, Marc Connelly translates the reverent faith of the Southern Negro into a play. The drama is an imaginative picture of Biblical history whose theme is God's tender and endless patience with mankind. The story begins just before the Creation, in a heaven where God and His angels enjoy fish fries and friendship, and soon look with dismay upon man's seeming degeneration on earth. From the Garden of Eden to the coming of the Redeemer, God's utter goodness, patience and compassion shine through His moments of discouragement. God is grieved by the sins of Cain, of his people in Egypt and Babylon, and by other distressingly modern transgressions. Yet he is unable to resist the simple reverent faith of Noah, Moses and others whose lives convince Him that the best in Man has made the Creation worthwhile.

Steve Perry will interpret the role of "De Lawd" in the production; John Getz plays that of Moses and Al Romo that of Noah. Kenn Whitmore is the Angel Gabriel. Mrs. Noah is played by Becky Welles. The pharaoh by Doug Whitaker, Hezdrel by Larry Schorno, Zeba by Linda Worley, Frank Harmier plays the King of Babylon and a preacher, Mr. Deshee. Others in the group are Peter Maule, Pam Straus, Sally Stangell, Bill Ogden, Jo Pierson, Peggy Adams, Judy Peckman, Janie Nelles, Pam Bryan, Rufus Clark, Ginger Chilton, Judy Hale, Walt McGee, Linda Schorberg, Jana Runnion, Shayna Wilson, Craig Hagstrom, Willa Ford, Carol Gehrke, Craig Harper, Mike Fisher, Marilyn Lones, and Nan McNutt. Meladee May and Sue Bordner are student leaders of the Choral Readers. Dr. Wilbur Baisinger is the Technical Director.

Editorial Comment

Only one conclusion can be reached when evaluating that recent fiasco called class senator elections—the class system of representation in student government is obsolete, at least on the UPS campus. Out of an 1800 member student body, less than 200 or one-ninth of the students voted in all three elections. The fact is that UPS students no longer identify with their various classes. Their loyalties lie first and foremost with their living groups. This fact becomes evident when we note that few students, other than those whose living groups were sponsoring candidates, even bothered to attend class meetings.

Obviously a more representative and up-to-date method of choosing Central Board members is needed. Thus, we would suggest the abolishment of class representation on CB except for the freshman class. (Freshmen need this extra identification to help them 'adjust' to the rigors of college life!)

Instead of class representatives we would suggest that six instead of three delegates-at-large be elected in the General Election.

ODE TO THE JUNIOR CLASS By JUDI LINDBERG

Ah, the excitement of elections—the joy and the charm . . .
 CLASS SENATORS—attention, everyone—sound the alarm!
 Oh, darn, it's raining—and I must eat my lunch!
 Yes, we've pulled through again—we, the class conscious bunch.

The Sigma Nu's were there; the Sigma Chi's, too—
 I'll mention the Tri Delts, a scattered few;
 Oh, yes, a Pi Phi, an Indee, and not to be contrary,
 One lone Theta—our ex-class secretary . . .
 There you have it: the complete, pitiful story,
 Stand tall—look proud—that's democracy in all its glory.
 Set your goals high among the voters so sparse;
 For UPS has claimed another exalted farce . . .
 —Bless us all

Writer Lays Down Ground Rules for Demonstrations

ED NOTE: Though we seriously doubt that UPS is the type of campus to demonstrate over anything, be it SUB food, the book store, classes, profs or what have you, we present the following rules for reform movements submitted to us by the Collegiate Press Service. This article, though written in a humorous vein, is basically serious in nature. We dedicate it to those few individuals, who, if they could find a valid issue on which to demonstrate, would have the energy and dedication to do so.

By ED SCHWARTZ
 Collegiate Press Service

Now that a healthy number of colleges across the country have demonstrated, are demonstrating, or will demonstrate, it is time to outline a few guidelines by which such uprisings can proceed. As a veteran of both guerilla and conventional warfare with the Oberlin College administration, I can assure neophytes in the profession that the game theory of campus combat is not as easy as it looks from the press reports. One must consider items ranging from student body support to public relations. Issues might even be a factor. In this and two subsequent articles, I will pose the problems. First, a few general rules which might prove helpful.

Rule One: Decide whether yours is a reform movement or a revolution. Reform movements aim at implementing change in a specific area of college policy, e.g., social rules, faculty tenure, cafeteria food. Once demands have been met, protest ceases.

Revolutionary movements aim at implementing basic changes within the university, e.g., resignation of the president, abolition of the board of trustees, elimination of classes.

Reform movements are candid as to goals, swift in execution, and receptive towards negotiations. Revolutionary movements are secretive as to goals, gradual in escalation, and receptive towards riot.

Your decision between the two will reflect various considerations: the degree to which you despise the administration; the degree to which your student body shares your sentiment; or the degree to which your student body can be encouraged to share your sentiment.

Admittedly, a movement which begins with limited goals can reach revolutionary proportions if the powers-that-be act stupidly in dealing with its participants. Similarly, a projected revolution can collapse if administration acceptance of subsidiary demands stifles the enthusiasm of its followers. While the latter development is more disappointing than the former, both should be foreseen. This leads us into our second point.

Rule Two: Know thine enemy. If you're fighting for reform, at least discover which individuals or committees exercise authority over the question. How silly it is to fight a college president for a social rules change determined by the faculty. All he has to do is to say, "Well, I'm just one among many on this issue," and then where will you be?

By the same token, if you're interested in revolution, determine who should be ousted. For example, your college president may be an impossible man. He might be supported, however, by an atrocious board of regents or trustees in the long run if you think you can sustain the battle, but an equally plausible alternative is to aim at issues for which you would fight irrespective of particular personalities.

Rule Three: Know thine campus.

"To know" in this rule means to possess an understanding of the main grievances of the student body. In crisis situations, temperament can be ascertained easily, but the normal lull is less indicative. It is clear that a reform movement protesting policies to which the campus is indifferent has as much chance of success as the anti-flouridation fighters. The same principle applies to revolutionaries. The American Revolution may have been fought around the Declaration of Independence, but there was that business with the tea to get things moving. And remember, the anger of a student body subsides around exam periods.

Rule Four: Know thine allies.

"Allies" means anyone in the faculty or administration who agrees with you. Without question, the Public Relations Quotient of a student demonstration multiplies tenfold if the angels of academia back it. In some instances, desire for such support may influence your initial choice of aims and actions, depending on what you expect to accomplish. The main problem, of course, is to determine whether Professor X is a friend throughout, or whether his good graces are contingent upon your long-term approach. You may decide to forego his friendship. If you do, at least evaluate your reasons carefully. Nothing hurts more than a disenchanting ally.

This by no means exhausts the list of rules for demonstration planning, but it can serve as a start.

HONORS CONVO

The Honors and Awards Convocation will be held Tuesday, May 4 at 10 a.m. in the Fieldhouse. Scholarship, athletic, departmental, special recognition and other honors and awards will be given to UPS students at that time.

What's an American?

He yells for the government to balance the budget and then takes the last dime he has to make the down payment on a car.

He whips the enemy and then gives 'em the shirt off his back.

He yells for speed laws that will stop fast driving and then won't buy a car if it can't make 100 miles an hour.

An American gets scared to death if we vote a billion dollars for education, but he's unconcerned when he find out we are spending three billion dollars a year for cigarettes.

He knows the line-up of every baseball team in the American and National Leagues and doesn't know half the words in the "Star Spangled Banner."

He'll spend half a day looking for vitamin pills to make him live longer, then drive 90 miles an hour on slick pavement to make up for the time he lost.

He ties up his dog but lets his 16 year old son run wild.

An American will work hard on a farm so he can move into town where he can make more money so he can move back to the farm.

When the American is in his office he talks about baseball, football or fishing, but when he is out at the games or on the lake, he talks of business.

He is the only fellow in the world who will pay 50 cents to park his car while he eats a 25c sandwich.

We're a country that has more food to eat than any other country in the world and more diets to keep us from eating it.

We're the most ambitious people on the earth, and we run from morning to night trying to keep our earning power up with our yearning power.

We're supposed to be the most civilized Christian nation on earth, but we still can't deliver payrolls without an armored car.

In America we have more experts on marriage than any other country in the world . . . and more divorces.

But we're still pretty nice folks. Calling a person "a real American" is the best compliment you can pay him. Most of the world is itching for what we have, but they'll never have it until they start scratching for it the way we did.

Back once more to haunt the corner of the editorial page is the only Brail sanctioned part of the Trail—our little smut corner. Those who were at the party tonight were Doug "Get away from me you nasty old woman" Smith, Rich "Oh well" Mulkey, Cheryl "Don't argue with me Hopalong!" Hulk, Grant "What's the Bird?" Tilley. Hopalong Kimbel limped in to argue with our Dear Beloved Editor-in-Chief, Frank "ass't. smut editor" Harmier was all dressed up when he stopped by. While he was here, he was recruited for next year's Brail but they found out that for some funny reason he is going to graduate this year. Kathy was here for a while bringing in a Ray of Sunshine. Huh, isn't 'of' a funny middle name? The rest of the Gang was at Pat's or Casey's or whichever one is "in" this week. Gerard called and wanted us to come and rescue him. Seems they wouldn't let him out of Pat's without proving he was under 21 . . .

WE GET LETTERS AND LETTERS

ON THE BIRD

The beacon of Truth shall be unveiled to cast its searching beam upon the stagnant waters of complacency and that dirty word "apathy." The Bird Cometh! Its terrible chirp shall be the voice crying in the wilderness, and from the wilderness indeed comes this cry. Subsisting on their honey and locusts, the out-group, anti-organization organized seers could not be better qualified to drive the money-changers from this temple, this University of Prized Students. After all, they've not been blinded, if only in one eye, by the facts within, much less by the facts beyond. After all, isn't the Whole of Truth to be found in the mere opposite to the Established Order? Isn't it?

Not only is the Truth not to be so easily encircled, it is not to be found at all. Only truths. Only what bears fruit here and now and here and now are too perishable a chariot to raise the attitudes and approaches they demand to the conceit of moral Right and Wrong, in short, of Truth. These ever--modulating truths wend their own way and branch out into myriads of paths which proceed both within and without the Established Order. They now say Pause! Withdraw! Reform! Escape!, and now Plunge! Involve! And like Goethe, they are neither Faust nor Mephistopheles, but a larger man than both. And not bound by the rigid dictates of Truth, these truths are free to carry their subscribers into an ever-widening beyond, where the air is purer than in the smoke-filled cell of the Brail conspirators. Let them hoard their corner on Truth—I'll be satisfied with my modest corner of it.

Listen to them? Why not? They've born the cross of experience. It's they who've sown the seeds of despair and reaped the harvest of knowledge. And we have only to read the Brail to enjoy the fruits of these labors. Don't we?

Yet, if their new Christianity has so solid a basis in an omnipresent here and a timeless now, why need it be nailed to so frail a cross as a one-eyed bird, (which, incidentally is a poorly-disguised bit of salvage from the smutty Realist). Beware the symbol. Every anti-group group has one, from the ban-the-bomb upside-down "Y" (which incidentally can be swiped off the grill of any Mercedes-Benz) to the swastika (which incidentally is a railroad symbol of long precedent). So precarious is the reactionary's group, so nebulous his theme, that the symbol is his only testimony to the oneness of his purpose. Chirp?

A THANK YOU

Dear Editor:

I hope there is a place in your school publication for a letter of this kind.

We recently had as guests in our home two members of your Adelphian Choir, Misses Judy Lowe and Judy Markham. The manner in which these two young ladies came into a stranger's home and assumed their proper place in that home was very gratifying to see. The poise, good manners and friendliness exhibited by these girls is a reflection of the student body and administration of the school they represent.

The parents and the school should be proud of these fine young ladies.

Sincerely,
Curtis R. Banner

A 'NOBLE' LETTER

What's happening to the Artists and Lectures proposal? I realize we must sit silently while the tuition is raised without any nominal effort on the part of the Administration to solicit our understanding (if not our approval). What I fail to understand, however, is the present administrative paradox (that is, the reticence of the "powers-that-be" (Board of Trustees) to immediately approve a measure that not only has the understanding and overwhelming approval of the student body but which is of recognizable significance in the development of what we prefer to call "liberal" education.

What about our duly elected representatives? Does the student body government say "we want it," "it's good," "let's get it" and then take action to organize student support or does it ignore the mandate of the student body and speak instead of compromise and conciliation? The latter is, of course, the only action being considered.

We must remember that a stronger effort may result in the complete loss of the proposal and make it glaringly evident that the student body government has no power whatsoever — a traumatic experience for any government.

Dear Editor:

Are we to take it that the Board of Trustees are the only ones who know how to spend OUR money?

Economically yours,
Michael R. N.

At last automation has reached the UPS teaching profession. An unknown source has contributed to the downfall of that delightful institution of the college professor. A new, useful installation has been added to the SUB in the form of (fan fare here!)—The Knowledge Computer. For only a dime, the price of a cup of that stuff they call coffee, an eager-to-learn student can take a comprehensive, four question test on one of four fields—travel, entertainment, sports and general knowledge. No more of this worrying about what class to take to justify spending a cool thou-a-year for tuition. All you do is invest a dime for each field of interest, take the test (forget about all those boring lectures you used to have to attend), and receive your score within seconds after you have completed the test. No more waiting for weeks for the professor to inefficiently score, mark and grade the papers, and finally return them. Forget the four year plan, the course schedules. Get out your sack of dimes, ready your button-pressing finger, and get an education!

Johnson, Adams and Martin Take Class Senator Posts

Rod Johnson, Ed Adams, and Hugh Martin have been elected by their respective classes to serve as class senators on Central Board next year. The senators will replace the now defunct class presidents. Only the freshmen will continue to elect officers.

Rod Johnson, from Bellevue, Wash., was elected senior class senator. Rod has been active on the UPS campus, being in Inter-Collegiate Knights his sophomore class cabinet composed of his fraternity, Sigma Cho, his junior year as well as working on Elections committee.

Rod said, "I don't really feel the senior class is a unified body and more so with the main point of graduation in their minds." He went on to say that, "As senior class senator my job will be to promote activities not by the senior class but for the senior class."

A senior column in the Trail will be tried next year. The initial columns will be written by Rod to keep the seniors in touch as to what the class is doing. Rod also hopes to promote the senior class with more work through the Placement Bureau established on the UPS campus.

Newly elected sophomore class senator is Hugh Martin. Hugh comes from Bellevue High School in Seattle and was active in student council and Boy's Club there.

This year Hugh is on the freshman council and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity. Commenting on his plans for the class, he said, "I plan to set up a sophomore class cabinet composed of advisors from various segments of the class. They will help execute the sophomore class dance January 7th and service projects for the school. Possibly later we will bring a speaker on the campus."

Ed Adams, next year's junior class senator, is from Palos Verdes, California. Ed along with being sports editor of the TRAIL, an Inter-Collegiate Knight, and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity is a representative to Inter Fraternity Council. He is majoring in English and plans to travel after he graduates.

Being elected class senator was not exactly a new experience for Ed, however. Ed was vice president of the student body and on the student council at his high school, outh Torrence High.

Ed stated, "In years past class presidents have stressed guest speakers, class projects, and other activities that seems to help everybody but the members of the class itself. I propose next year to help the junior class materialistically, that is, work for the junior class itself. Instead of just throwing another junior class dance, we'll have one where juniors are charged only half price. This is a nominal example, but it shows the change of action I plan to follow in the upcoming year. The means will not always be orthodox, but the end will benefit the junior class. In any action I take it will represent the majority of the junior class, for it is a representative post that I hold."

UPS Alumnae Pass National OT Exam

According to Mrs Elizabeth Waggoner, director of the UPS school of Occupational Therapy, the six UPS alumnae were Mrs. Edward Hoyt, Susan Y. Mitsuhiro, Mrs. Myrle D. Thornhill, Marjorie J. White, Mrs. Rob R. Wilson and Katherine M. G. Wong.

UPS Will Gain Six New Profs

At least six professors will not be returning to UPS next fall. The professors include Dr. Franklin Blood, chemistry; Madam Germaine Brown, French; Professor Nathan Gross, education; Dr. Duane Leach, history; and Miss Jacqueline Martin, French. The appointment of new professors will be announced next week, according to President R. Franklin Thompson.

By solving problems in astronautics, Air Force scientists expand man's knowledge of the universe. Lt. Howard McKinley, M.A., tells about research careers on the Aerospace Team.

(Lt. McKinley holds degrees in electronics and electrical engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology and the Armed Forces Institute of Technology. He received the 1963 Air Force Research & Development Award for his work with inertial guidance components. Here he answers some frequently-asked questions about the place of college-trained men and women in the U.S. Air Force.)

Is Air Force research really advanced, compared to what others are doing? It certainly is. As a matter of fact, much of the work being done right now in universities and industry had its beginnings in Air Force research and development projects. After all, when you're involved in the development of guidance systems for space vehicles—a current Air Force project in America's space program—you're working on the frontiers of knowledge.

What areas do Air Force scientists get involved in? Practically any you can name. Of course the principal aim of Air Force research is to expand our aerospace capability. But in carrying out this general purpose, individual projects explore an extremely wide range of topics. "Side effects" of Air Force research are often as important, scientifically, as the main thrust.

How important is the work a recent graduate can expect to do? It's just as important and exciting as his own knowledge and skill can make it. From my own experience, I can say that right from the start I was doing vital, absorbing research. That's one of the things that's so good about an Air Force career—it gives young people the chance to do meaningful work in the areas that really interest them.

What non-scientific jobs does the Air Force offer? Of course the Air Force has a continuing need for rated officers—pilots and navigators. There are also many varied and challenging administrative-managerial positions. Remember, the Air Force is a vast and complex organization. It takes a great many different kinds of people to keep it running. But there are two uniform criteria: you've got to be intelligent, and you've got to be willing to work hard.

What sort of future do I have in the Air Force? Just as big as you want to make it. In the Air Force, talent has a way of coming to the top. It has to be that way, if we're going to have the best people in the right places, keeping America strong and free.

What's the best way to start an Air Force career? An excellent way—the way I started—is through Air Force Officer Training School. OTS is a three-month course, given at Lackland Air Force Base, near San Antonio, Texas, that's open to both men and women. You can apply when you're within 210 days of graduation, or after you've received your degree.

How long will I be committed to serve? Four years from the time you graduate from OTS and receive your commission. If you go on to pilot or navigator training, the four years starts when you're awarded your wings.

Are there other ways to become an Air Force officer? There's Air Force ROTC, active at many colleges and universities, and the Air Force Academy, where admission is by examination and Congressional appointment. If you'd like more information on any Air Force program, you can get it from the Professor of Aerospace Studies (if there's one on your campus) or from an Air Force recruiter.

"Most of the kids spend their summer vacations at the beach, bowling, watching movies and by dancing. Jobs are not available in Beirut. Generally the students don't think it's appropriate. They like to spend a hot day sun bathing at the beach and then enjoy a cool night up in the nearby mountains," said Eileen Mahshi, this week's UPS Unique.

Although Eileen was born in Palestine, she attended schools in the African nation of Libya for the first six years of her academic life. Then Eileen's parents sent her to a boarding school in Beirut, Lebanon. "Students representing all religions came from many parts of the middle east to my British-Lebanese school."

During the summer before her last year at the Beirut high school, Eileen made her first visit to the United States. She came with her family to visit her grandmother and uncle in Tacoma and then they traveled down to California and visited with other relatives. "I liked the trip very much. I was amazed at the great amount of greenness in Tacoma. The differences which I found in the U.S., when compared to the Beirut area, appealed to me. For the first time in my life I saw wood houses and many residences with beautifully landscaped property."

Eileen returned to Beirut and completed high school there. The next fall she enrolled in a small American liberal arts college for women in the city, attending for two years. Eileen sees few major differences between her Beirut college and UPS. "I believe that students here have to write more papers. I also think that at UPS the general fields of music and the sciences are stronger and perhaps the department of education is larger. There are no facilities in my Beirut college to invite men in for social gatherings. We had to go out if we wanted to dance. I don't know if that's a disadvantage or not."

The family of this tall boarding school student came to Tacoma in 1963. Eileen joined them last summer. "At first I couldn't understand slang. When students spoke it I didn't know whether to laugh or not. I don't regret my move so far, but I would like to go back to sunny Beirut during the rainy periods and this summer if the weather depresses me."

When she is depressed, Eileen can turn to her two favorite kinds of American food: potato chips and cherry pie. These two treats join her long preferred Beirut concoctions: shawirma (a special type of meat slowly grilled), tabouleh (a salad of parsley, tomatoes, onions and grain), and cooked vine leaves filled with rice and meat.

The soft-spoken brunette will graduate next year with an English literature major and a minor in religious education. Presently she is considering attending graduate school and finally secure a job which allows her to travel. Some day she hopes to teach on the college level.

Locker Room

By Ed Adams

To you members of the Associated Student Body I humbly give my apologies for not being able to cover the number one event in the athletic field this year. No, it was not a track meet, tennis match, golf classic, or even a baseball game, but instead a rally committee meeting. Yes, one of those little-known gatherings of a subsversive organization here on campus inflicted with the desire to rant and rave caustic tidings at athletic games such as, "Cream PLU", Why don't you feed our team raw meat, coach"? "That a way Judi, scream some more", and, "String up the sports editor". The fever this instigates at basketball games and other athletic events though is nowhere close to the mass hysteria that goes on in one rally committee meeting. Here in a small dark dusty room in the outer limits of the vast crevices of the SUB there commences a barbaric ritual which would cause the blood of any civilized man to run cold. From reports I have received this is what takes place.

Scene: Back room in SUB. Girls on rally squad are all present. Mike Hara, better known as Pineapple, enters slowly through small door opening.

Hara: (slams door and bolts lock). Ah ha, my little egg foo wong, I have you now.

Girls: (all together) Wait a minute Pineapple none of that stuff, you said this time we were really going to have a meeting.

Hara: Don't call me pineapple.

Girls: Don't you dare Pineapple or it will be Hiroshima all over again. (Girls scream and start running around the room).

Hara: (as he approaches Girl No. 1 who is standing in the doorway). Why are you not running like the rest of them?

Girl No. 1: (Blushing) My dress is caught in the door.

Hara: Hooray! I always knew old Buddha would come through some day.

Girl No. 1: Eeek!

Hara: (As he starts to make the big move a sudden convulsion comes over him). Oh no, what a time for this to happen; I need another fix. (Reaches into pocket, and pulls out a small real pineapple). This should do it. (Slurp, slurp) Oh! Oh! Psycho! Psycho!

I must close this observation of rally committee at this point due to Trail censors, but I think enough has been shown to clear up that distorted notion that the rally committee is getting something done for next year. This is quite evident as rally committee sent a record to Central Board each Wednesday night which, when played, sticks on the part that says, "No report".

Sports Editor: Touche, Pineapple.

Hara: Don't call me Pineapple.

Girl No. 1: (Blushing) My dress is caught in the door.

LOGGER CREWMEN launch their shell during practice in preparation for a triangular meet with PLU and UBC.

UPS Crew Team To Meet PLU, UBC

This Saturday, May 1, is a very important day for the University of Puget Sound crew team. For on this date the UPS crew men headed by Al Campbell tangle with the Pacific Lutheran crew team and the always strong University of British Columbia team.

In this triangular meet the boatmen of UPS definitely have a chance for victory. Team captain or Commodore Al Campbell stated, "We have trained hard this year and now I feel all that work will blossom into a victory on the water."

The meet will be at 2 p.m. at American Lake this Saturday. The race will start at the northeast end of the lake and finish at the northwest end. I urge all students who have time Saturday to turn out and support our crew team. If you do not know how to reach the lake I recommend the freeway to the Gravelly Lake exit. Turn off on this exit and follow Gravelly Lake Drive to Veterans Drive. Turn right onto Veterans Drive and this will lead straight to American Lake.

Loggers Lose To Viking Nine

The University of Puget Sound batmen had a very dreary afternoon last Saturday as the Western Washington State College Vikings wrapped up a clean sweep over the Loggers with 8-3 and 4-0 victories in a double header at UPS' Burns Field.

The first game was interesting only as far as the third inning, as at that point the defending Evergreen Conference baseball champions wrapped it up when they combined Jim Galley's double with three singles, an error and a stolen base for three runs.

Wildcats, Lutes Stomp Loggers

The UPS Loggers could not keep up with Central Washington State College in track as the Wildcats swept of victories in 13 of 17 events to down the University of Puget Sound and Pacific Lutheran University in an Evergreen Conference triangular track meet last Saturday afternoon at the Pacific Lutheran campus.

UPS ended the afternoon with 19 points as compared to Pacific Lutheran's 56 points and three time league champion Central Washington's 108 points.

Central had two double winners. Wildcat Jim Kjolso won both the 100 and 220 in times of 10.5 and 21.9 respectively.

Two records crumpled, one to Central's Jim Boora who won the half mile in 1:55, six tenths of a second better than the league record. Local Logger hero Arvid Anderson, who placed third in the 880 for UPS, set a new school record in the event with a time of 1:58.6.

Other points for UPS came from Joe Wingard who placed fourth in both the mile and three mile events. Tony Pasckvale took fourth in the 120 yard high hurdles for other badly needed points. The UPS exalted hero Joe Peyton was not quite feeling his oats as he placed second in the broad jump and first in the high jump with an effort of five feet ten inches. The final points for UPS came as a Logger foursome captured second in the 440 yard relay.

The only UPS runs were credited to freshman Steve Helgeron, as he singled home two runs after the bases had been loaded by walks. Sophomore Floyd Carpenter stole home for the final UPS tally.

The second game was clinched for the visitors in the seventh inning as Viking Duane Hammil belted a two-run homer off losing pitcher Dave Johnson. The other UPS loss was credited to Denny Peterson.

The next Logger home game is May 7th against the University of British Columbia glovemen.

PARDON MY OPINION

What is your opinion of the "Knowledge Computer?"

Kristine Walker, junior, Chicago, Ill.: I think the students should take advantage of the opportunities they've already paid for with their tuition and not waste money on an inaccurate mechanical professor.

Craig Hagstrom, freshman, Mercer Island: I'd like to know where it came from—what is it? Is it a test of brains or a show of ignorance?

Shirley Beebe, freshman, Vashon Island: It's a gas the first time, but will never replace the dwindling human faculty. I can see it now—the bookstore will start selling roles of dimes with the books.

Tom Tripp, sophomore, Portland: I really don't think it serves a purpose; there are better ways to find out your intelligence.

Sue Schieber, junior, Seattle: I think it's great. It told me I was short of genius. I'd like to know who's getting the money.

Jay Thompson, senior, San Francisco: It beats the 'flippers.' I think it's an excellent way for learning small bits of conversational knowledge. I can't see why it hasn't been on the college campus before this time.

SNCC Establishes Student Paper

Saturday, April 3, a number of students met in Seattle at Wesley House's "Edge" (coffee-house). They were representing various campus student groups which are involved in the southern Negro's fight for a vote. On some campuses these groups are new, on others they have existed latently or actively for some time. The UPS group known as f.o.-SNCC, pronounced foe snick—or friends of Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee), meeting on Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. room 8, is helping to establish a statewide civil rights newspaper, an outgrowth of the "Edge Convention."

The first edition of the newspaper, The Northwest Freedom News, will be out in three weeks. It will be printed by the student group at Western Washington State College in Bellingham, supported by individual citizens, and supplied with news by each campus group participating.
